

Rice pudding popsicle with raspberries

1 Mash raspberries with a fork and sweeten to taste with sugar, if at all necessary. Set aside. (Feel free to experiment, the kitchn used chopped mango, and I'm sure bananas or other soft fruits will work great, too.) Set aside.

2 Combine coconut milk, milk and the pinch of salt in a huge pot, then bring to a boil. Add the rice and let simmer over low to medium heat - stir regularly to make sure the rice doesn't stick to the bottom - until the rice is very tender, 22 to 25 minutes. The mixture will be pretty viscous in the end (you can add a little more milk, if the mixture is too firm). Remove from heat and add the sweetened condensed milk.

3 Either mix together the rice pudding and the fruits or fill into the popsicle molds using a layering technic. Insert sticks and freeze for at least 4 hours or overnight.

4 To release the popsicles from their molds, either briefly dip into warm water or warm the molds with your hands. Enjoy!

Rice pudding popsicle with raspberries

Recipe source: inspired by the kitchn

Required time: ~ 30 min, plus 4 hours in the freezer

Ingredients (yields 6-8 popsicles, depending on size):

- * ~200 g raspberries (or other fruit)
- * sugar, to taste
- * 400 ml coconut milk
- * 200 ml milk (3,5 %), add more, if necessary
- * a pinch of salt
- * 100 g short grain white rice
- * 200 g sweetened condensed milk